The White-tailed Kite was well observed with 8-power glasses at 200 feet. This species is never common, though at least one may usually be seen during the course of a day's trip. The most I have observed in one day in this area is nine. Shorebirds, which are usually found on the mud flats at low tide, were entirely absent during the census due to high flood-waters throughout the day following eleven consecutive days of rainfall. Many waterfowl seen in the distance could not be definitely identified because of poor visibility.

December Field Trip

The December field trip was taken on the fifteenth to the Berkeley campus of the University of California and Berkeley Aquatic Park. Rather disagreeable weather, presumably, deterred many members, but at 9:30 a.m. a small group of birders assembled near Sather Gate from whence the trip was begun. Gray and impenetrable clouds hung over the Bay region all day, sending down occasional showers, but despite these unpromising conditions a very profitable trip resulted.

Approximately two hours were spent on the campus, during which the appearance of an unusually handsome male Purple Finch amongst some Coton-easter pannosa, and more particularly a Slate-colored Junco considerably brightened the dreary day for us. Eleven-thirty found us at Berkeley Aquatic Park, where another pleasant surprise awaited our notice, which after careful scrutiny was determined to be a Short-billed Gull; quite an unusual sight for most birders.

After completing our observations we were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Myer to their home for refreshments. As always it was a very enjoyable occurrence. The following twenty-five species were seen on the University campus:

Sharp-shinned Hawk	Hermit Thrush	House Finch
Quail	Varied Thrush	Spotted Towhee
Anna Hummingbird	Robin	Brown Towhee
Red-shafted Flicker	Ruby-crowned Kinglet	Junco
Coast Jay	Pipit	Slate-colored Junco

	Purple Finch

The following thirty-four species were found at Berkeley Aquatic Park:

Eared Grebe	Sparrow Hawk	Herring Gull
Pied-billed Grebe	Coot	California Gull

January Field Trip

The January field trip was taken on the 12th to Lake Merritt, Oakland. The day was overcast but not unpleasant. There were no outstanding observations made; in fact, the ducks were not very numerous, the recent heavy rains having sent them on their way farther south. However, a census was taken with the following result:

Eared Grebe 72	Amer. Golden-eye 41	California Jay 2
Western Grebe 1	Ruddy Duck 480	Bush-tit 30
Pied-billed Grebe 45	Quail 2	Hermit Thrush 1
American Egret 2	Coot 237	Ruby-cr. Kinglet 1
Black-cr. Night Heron 12	Glaucous-winged Gull 145	Robin 12
Mallard 3	Western Gull 4	Cedar Waxwing 50
Baldpate 303±	California Gull 17	Audubon Warbler 3

Eighteen members attended the trip, as follows: Messrs. and Mesdames Dunshee, Myer, Stephens; Mesdames Courtright, Saunders; Misses Berg, Blake, Cohen, MacIver, Stanton; Messrs.
